

I strongly oppose any relaxation of ownership standards. There were valid reasons the cross ownership limitations were imposed years ago--to insure a diversity of voices in the marketplace of ideas. They have worked well, and should continue. There are already too few independent media voices. The proposal being considered by the commission will make the situation worse, to the detriment of the American people. /W. Richard Whitaker, Professor of Journalism & Broadcasting, Buffalo State College.